If you know the general rules of chatting, you will definitely be able to start a call with a new user in a great way!!!

I'm sure you know that in the first minutes of a call, it's very important to show the user that they will feel comfortable communicating with you and, of course, to take the initiative so that they don't feel confused!

However, on calls, your TOV (tone of voice), mood, and intonation are no less important elements of starting a chat with new users (and not only). After all, the user is not able to see you, but only hear you, and your main emotions are deduced from your voice and presentation of information.

For example, a user tells you : "Hello, I am new to this"

Your actions should be as follows:

1. You greet the caller with a pleasant tone of voice that shows you are happy to have them on the call.
2. Take the initiative and offer options for questions or topics that the user would like to talk about.
3. You can also offer him a choice of tools that he would like to use to find out the answer.
4. After that, you provide the answer according to the rules.

Very important!

It's not enough to say "I can tell you everything you want to know" because the user doesn't know your competence and what you have to offer, so it's very important to tell them.

For example:

"Hello darling! Welcome to the Nebula platform, my name is I am happy that you are here!"

No worries, I will tell you how it works. You can ask whatever is bothering you now, there is no strange or stupid question, so don't even worry about it. Every your question is unique and very important. We can talk about love, career, money, past life, so really everything"

But in the next sentence, we immediately ask the user a contextual question to start a dialog, without waiting for them to ask it first. Most often, users come to us with questions about love, so we can start with that. If a user does ask a question first, it is usually a higher priority.

For example:

"Darling, do you have a partner?"

"How is your love life, darling?"

"Is there something that is bothering you in your love life"

"Hello darling! I am happy that you are here!"
